

A wild ride

HASSLOCH, GERMANY For 192 hours in 2003, Richard Rodriguez went around and around, up and down. His heart was often in his throat. When he finished the wild roller coaster ride, this English teacher from Chicago was tired and confused, but really happy. It was the longest roller coaster ride ever!

Rodriguez slept while he rode the German roller coaster. The seats in his little car were very soft, but it was not easy. The first night he slept only an hour. "Your body learns to sleep after a few days," explained Rodriguez. His car also had a little toilet. Every eight hours, he stopped for a short 15- minute rest. The biggest problem was the hot August sun. Rodriguez had a lot of water with him. He drank most of it and put the rest on his head.
