Pam was taking a walk one day when she happened to look down and see something shiny laying on the street. She bent down to pick it up and discovered that it was a cell phone. She examined it and found that not only was it a high quality model, but that its condition was almost brand new. The battery had a full charge. She hesitated for a moment. Her cell phone still worked but it was old and big. She had been saving money to buy a new cell phone but it would be another month before she could purchase one. This seemed like a perfect opportunity. All she had to do was take the card out of the new phone and replace it with the card from her old phone...
